There is only one server time zone, and this is obtained using the date_default_timezone_get() function, although this can be overridden with the $GLOBALS['server_timezone'] variable in the config.inc file.

Advise your users not to disable cookies, at least for this one domain, and the setting for client timezone on each MNU_USER record will always be available and will always be accurate. This would make a default setting for the client time zone completely redundant.
