It is impossible to diagnose the exact cause of this problem as the script for the logon page is terminating before it can produce any output. You have obviously not installed everything correctly, but without stepping through the code line by line with a debugger as it is being executed it will not be possible to diagnose the exact cause of the problem.

Perhaps you should turn error reporting on to see what appears.

By the way, it is a good idea to install everything onto a local development server first before attempting to use a remote server as it makes debugging a lot easier.
