Subject: Re: What is a framework?
Posted by AJM on Sat, 24 Mar 2007 00:16:14 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I started to write this framework in my spare time in 2003 after I had taught myself PHP. It is actually a rewrite of a similar framework which I first designed and built in 1985 in COBOL, then rewrote in the 1990s in an obscure language called Uniface.

I built it as a personal project and published some documentation on my website, then I started getting enquiries from people who wanted to use my code in their applications. After a while I decided to release it as open source.

It is entirely my own work and not a copy of someone else's work. I designed and built everything single handed without any interference from others who think they know better.

I'm glad you like it. It means that my efforts are not totally wasted.