Tony, I found the following Uniface broken links:

Uniface
=======
http://www.marston-home.demon.co.uk/Tony/uniface/3tiers2mode lsXMLstreams.html
(should point to http://www.tonymarston.net/uniface/3tiers2modelsXMLstreams.h tml)
linked from page:
http://www.tonymarston.net/php-mysql/standards.html

Line 289
The leaders of this doomed project had a team of 6 developers working for 6 months building and testing their development infrastructure, but at the end of the day it proved to be totally worthless. When I left the client's site and returned to my head office I decided to build my own version of a 3-tier infrastructure with a separate model for the application layer. What those supposed 'experts' could not accomplish in 6 months I managed to complete on my own in 2 weeks. The results can be reviewed in 3 Tiers, 2 Models, and XML Streams. I have subsequently used these ideas to convert the 150+ forms in my demonstration UNIFACE system, which contains a Menu and Security system and a sample application, so that it is totally 3-tier. It just goes to show what you can achieve if your approach is sound to begin with.

http://www.marston-home.demon.co.uk/Tony/uniface/componentte mplates.html
(should point to http://www.tonymarston.net/uniface/componenttemplates.html)
linked from page:
http://www.tonymarston.net/php-mysql/object-relational-mappe rs-are-evil.html

Line 229
The UNIFACE language had a feature called <a href="
http://www.marston-home.demon.co.uk/Tony/uniface/componentte mplates.html">component templates which made it easy to generate new components from a pre-defined template or pattern. It worked on the premise that each component can be categorised by structure, behaviour and content, with the template built around a particular structure (screen layout) and behaviour (code). A functioning component could be created by combining a template with a particular entity (database table). As I had found this feature a great aid to rapid application development I wanted something similar in my PHP framework, but as it did not exist I had to invent it. I devised a catalog of transaction patterns where the structure is provided by an XSL stylesheet, and the behaviour is provided by a page controller. By combining a pattern with a database table class (the content) the result is a functioning transaction.

In the page
http://www.radicore.org/glossary.php
the link to htp://www.oracle.com (Line 384) (with one t) should be changed to
http://www.oracle.com

Also in
http://www.radicore.org/glossary.php
the following anchors are duplicated:
rls - lines 966 and 974
rbac - lines 931 and 970
vpd - lines 1136 and 1151

Also, in page http://www.tonymarston.net/php-mysql/radicore-front-end.html
line 96
Files in one application can be accessed by the other by means of modifications to the include_path in htaccess files. The front-end should use an include_path which specifies directories in the following order:

the link to http://uk2.php.net/manual/sl/ini.sect.path-directory.php is not working.

Thanks.

Thanks for spotting those. The double links are actually deliberate when terms can be expressed in either words or initials, as in

RBAC (Role Based Access Control)

the links to
http://uk2.php.net/manual/en/function.strtotime.php

Thanks for that extensive list. I can't fix some of those external links as the pages do not exist any more. AS for those pages on http://www.marston-home.demon.co.uk/Tony/ they should not be used any more as everything gets redirected to my main site on http://www.tonymarston.net is broken.

(Why language hk and not en?)

RADICORE works with default_charset <LINK> set to "UTF-8" which means that data containing accented characters can be used without requiring the multi byte string functions to be enabled. Again there is a setting in the .htaccess file which overrides anything which is set in your php.ini file.

Tony,

In page
http://www.tonymarston.net/php-mysql/output-to-pdf.html
the link to
http://www.php.net/manual/en/ref.info.php#ini.max-execution- time (line 74)
redirected to http://php.net/manual/en/ref.info.php#ini.max-execution-time
is broken.

The page ref.info.php exists but the anchor #ini.max-execution-time does not exist.

Please note that the PDF document is constructed in memory, so avoid giving it overly large amounts of data to process. This may cause the PHP process to run out of memory, or it may run out of time.

Perhaps a link to
http://php.net/manual/en/function.set-time-limit.php
would be appropiate.

In page
http://www.tonymarston.net/php-mysql/functions-and-variables .html
the link to
http://uk.php.net/reserved.variables#reserved.variables.serv er (line 4996)
is broken.
It can be replaced with
http://php.net/reserved.variables

These are also broken links (the fragments do not exist)
http://www.php.net/manual/en/reserved.variables.php#reserved .variables.post (lines 1972, 2015, 3082, 4713, 4721, 4805)

Tony,

The link to unixreview has a space in it making it a broken one

Both URLs are valid, so it's not worth changing just to avoid redirection. It may be fashionable to drop the leading 'www', but that is no reason to force everybody to change existing hyperlinks and bookmarks.

Tony,

In
php#reserved.variables.session
there is a broken link to http://www.php.net/manual/en/reserved.variables.php#reserved .variables.session (line 378)
(The page http://www.php.net/manual/en/reserved.variables.php is not broken but the fragment #reserved.variables.session is)

Perhaps it should be replaced by http://php.net/manual/en/reserved.variables.session.php

Thanks.

No, those links aren't broken. They each take you to an entry in the amendment history for that particular date. Each of those entries is a single line, and they are grouped together at the bottom of the page, so it seems as if they are all in the same place.

http://www.tonymarston.net/uniface/standards.html#2003-09-20 in my browser takes me to the top of the page and so does http://www.tonymarston.net/uniface/standards.html#2005-01-22
(but http://www.tonymarston.net/uniface/standards.html#history works fine)

Shouldn't line 888 be <td>22nd Jan 2005</td>
instead of <td>22nd Jan 2005</td>

Thanks.

Tony,

It's okay to leave it as it is.
Changing it is more of a preventive measure.

The server gives a 301 status code (permanent redirect).

That means that perhaps, some time from now, the http://www.lsd.ic.unicamp.br/~oliva/fun/prog/resign-patterns URI will stop working and only http://www.fsfla.org/~lxoliva/fun/prog/resign-patterns
will work.

That's why I suggest the change as a preventive measure.

See
http://validator.w3.org/checklink?uri=http:// www.tonymarston.net/php-mysql/design-patterns.html&hide_ type=all&depth=&check=Check

Thanks.
